Try a different method The Conair Pet Nail Clipper is a scissors-style clipper available at PetSmart. It features a no-slip grip and is available in two sizes. It's also pink. That's basically why I bought it. Nearly all my grooming stuff is pink of purple. This is a decent clipper, though. Photo by Erin Koski As a dog nerd, I find myself geeking out about weird stuff on a regular basis. Dog toenails are one of my geek specialties. I mean, most people can manage to hack a dog's nails shorter, just like most people can make a lasagna or paint a recognizable picture of a hippopotamus. To trim nails really well though, it helps to know a bit about the anatomy of the toenail and the quick inside. If you're really nerdy though, you end up wanting to know everything you possibly can about managing dog toenails. You end up learning about trimming angles, how to shorten a quick, how to cut black toenails. dremeling and filing, how long toenails affect the dog's posture and joint health, what dewclaws are actually for... I work at a doggy daycare facility that offers assorted grooming services including nail trims. This means I get to practice cutting a lot of different toenails on a lot of different dogs. It also means I get to find out what makes a good and bad nail trimmer. Sharpness is really the most important thing, more so than having a big trimmer for a big dog or a small trimmer for a small dog. A sharp trimmer allows me to take small slices off the nail, which is much more comfortable for the dog. You can tell a nail trimmer is dull when it takes a lot of force to chop through the nail. This is because it is breaking the nail rather than cutting it. Not comfortable for the dog, not good for precision trimming either. Pros: Nice grippy handle even when wet. Sharp enough to cut small slices off both large and tiny toenails. It's pink. Cons: I'm not sure how long it will stay sharp. Bottom Line: I need to figure out how to sharpen nail clippers. A rotating attachment provides an alternative to clipping which has a high risk of accidental cuts. Keeping a dog's nails at a comfortable length without cutting them too short has been challenging for many owners. Overgrown dog nails can be very uncomfortable, requiring a solution that allows quick and effortless nail trimming. Reading on will help you learn more about why ConairPro might be worthy of your consideration and why it's in our list of the best dog nail grinders. Features of ConairPRO Professional Dog Nail Grinder This dog nail grinder is electric-powered, with a long enough cord to help you navigate to all four paws on bigger dogs. There is no more straining to reach your dog's paws, so you can get the job done in a reasonable amount of time. Because the grinder plugs in, you don't need to worry about having a battery run out and waiting for it to recharge. All you need to do is plug it in, and you're good to go. Having better reach makes nail trimming easier for dogs skittish about having their paws handled. The rotating head is a safer alternative to clippers. Many owners using clippers end up inadvertently cutting into the quick. Cutting the quick can make nail trimming a painful experience that you and your dog dread. When you use a grinder, the motion files down the nails instead of cutting. There is a greatly reduced risk of cutting the quick, sparing you and your dog from an unpleasant experience. One of the things that users find the most helpful about this grinder is the quiet motor. Many dogs get anxious about loud sounds that many grinder motors make. Because this motor is quiet, dogs that are usually nervous or combative about nail trimmers will adjust quickly. Your dog will be less likely to have negative associations with the nail grinder, making grinding your dog's nails much easier. Even though this grinder is powerful, it also has a lightweight design. Your hand won't feel as heavy during use. The grinder will be more comfortable during use because of the reduced risk of strain. When you don't have to strain, you are less likely to accidentally hurt your dog or miss the end of the nail. The grinder has a compact design that makes storage easier. You can make sure that the grinder is always somewhere easy to find. Because this tool takes up less space, you can store it with its attachments in the same place all the time. Everything you need to trim your dog's nails will be where you need it for your pet's nails. The protective cover is adjustable to help eliminate the spread of nail dust. Many owners who are unsure of whether they want to use a nail grinder have concerns about getting dust from the nails everywhere. Having this cover available helps keep everything much tidier when trimming your dog's nails. The attachments help provide the type of finish you want for your dog's nails. Using the stone attachment helps provide a coarse grind and the sander attachment is a finer grind. When you can control the grind while trimming your dog's nails, you can reduce the risk of your dog splitting its nails and having painful consequences. Both of the attachments are interchangeable, so you can easily switch out depending on your needs for your dog's nails. Because they are interchangeable, you can make the switch very easily. Being able to switch between the two with minimal effort makes everything more accessible when you trim your dog's nails. Is This The Right Choice For You? If trimming or clipping your dog's nails has become a chore that you dread, you may want to give the ConairPRO Professional Dog Nail Grinder a try. Overgrown nails are painful for dogs and can go as far as contributing to joint pain [1]. Keeping your dog's nails cut reasonably short is key to preventing these problems. When you need to care for your dog's nails, this should be as stress-free as possible. However, conventional clippers make it difficult to trim the nails without cutting into the quick. This type of incident is painful and may make your dog resistant to having its paws and nails handled. When you trim your dog's nails with one of these tools, the process will go a lot more easily for both of you. Some dogs are always going to be somewhat difficult about anything involving their nails. However, you'll be able to avoid having the process become needlessly traumatic. If you like the job that nail grinders do or prefer to make a change from typical clippers, buying a ConairPRO Professional Dog Nail Grinder will be a wise choice. Keeping your dog's nails properly clipped is an integral part of any grooming routine, and making this routine as hassle-free as possible is helpful for your dog. © 1996-2014, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates
